A Strange Story of Wealth, Mystery and Death.

William Wineman, a middle aged man, died in the hospital at Montgomery, Alabama, last Thursday, and on his deathbed told an interesting story.

He came from Wallenstein, Germany, several years ago, and settled at Hot Springs, Hot Springs from West Point, Ga., a physician, whose name is not stated, and he and Wineman became great friends.

Last winter the doctor became ill of a lingering fever.

Wineman nursed him most tenderly through his illness.

An old woman, before he died, and while his reason was entirely intact, had told him to friend to him in consideration of his love for him and of his kindly attention he desired to make him a present.

The dying man said that under a certain rock near the root of a certain tree, he buried a chest full of gold.

He had buried with his own hands

$14,000 in gold money.

He made a will giving Wineman a title to the money, and appended to it a diagram or map intended to show the location of the treasure. Wineman had his friend properly searched, but could not find the money.

Feeling lost he should let his secret out, he searched asunder and in a mysterious way, principally at night. The citizens intercepted his movements as suspicious. Seeing him go out after dark with a pick and ax, they waited for a good round-up.

He was a law breaker, and turned out to leave the neighborhood.

This and a lack of ready funds caused him to leave and go to Montgomery, where he secured employment. He was just preparing to resume the search for the hidden treasure when sickness overtook him.

His relatives stated that as above detailed,

he has only one relative in this country,

a brother who lives in New York.

LETTER FROM TEXAS.

A Former Citizen of This Place Talks of Affairs in the Lone Star State.

GEORGETOWN, TEXAS, May 27.—W.

D. Nickell, our much esteemed citizen and townsmen, died at his home yesterday.

Mr. Nickell had been the leading druggist of Georgetown for a number of years. He owned a large amount of Texas pride land.

For the last few months was editor of the Georgetown Democrat. The doctors say Mr. Nickell caused his own death by the excessive use of cigarettes.

A young gentleman whose name I do not know, John G. O'Brien, died of this disease last Saturday. The old judge seems to be a little angry over the affair, and is riding the road now with his Winchester in search of the little truants. He says his daughter knew it was strictly against the law for them to leave home without first giving him consent.

There was quite a stir in Georgetown yesterday. The three party folks held a convention and nominated candidates for all the offices, I believe, except the presidency. I understand that they nominated Mr. John Hutto for the office of representative, which will likely cause a division in the party.

The commencement at the great Southwestern University begins next Friday. A number of students from other schools will be here and we contemplate a good time in general.

The prospect for good crop so far is the best that has been in Texas for a number of years.

THE HERALD comes to us every week neat as a new pin, chock full of good news.

Success to Mr. Sam Henry Wilson.

WESTERNER.

Tow linen and lace used to be conno class of women look so well as our

Samuels & King, Mt. Sterling, carry a complete line of mod-

A CRUEL ADVANTAGE.

Why the Russian Peasants Hate Their Jewish Neighbors.

"Why do you hate the Jew?" one day asked my Russian friend.

"Because," said he, "the Jew brings nothing into the country, he takes all he can out of it, and while he is here he makes the peasant his slave, and lives out for the sake of squeezing money out of everything."

This was a strong statement, he went on to amplify it by a variety of illustrations.

After the Polish insurrection of 1863, the Russian government set to work energetically to Russify that country, and particularly to Russify the Jews. Capital means they employed, aside from actively persecuting the heterodox in religion and politics, was to colonize large numbers of peasants from the interior of Russia upon farms which had been confiscated. Agricultural implements were furnished to these peasants and everything else that would start them off, as to form a nucleus of Russian life in the midst of the disloyal provinces. Twenty years have passed since this great Russifying measure was put into force, and what is the result?

If, as a traveler, you come into a Russian village, it is difficult to realize that those of the neighboring Lithuanians and Poles. You ask for horses to continue your journey, and are quickly supplied by these Russians; the price is fixed, and you are about to pay it to the Russian who brings your carriage to the door. He, however, refuses to take the money, not to him, but to the proprietor of the tavern. You ask why. He answers that he is not allowed to take any money, that the horses he has brought belong to the Jew. You begin to inquire and you find that the Jew not only owns the horses, but also the carriage, the driver, the team, the horses, the place at which the peasants have to buy. You learn also that the Jew is creditor to nearly every peasant for miles around, and has a lien upon them all, that peasant may grow upon his land. You find that the peasant contributes his last cent for his wife, but for the Jew, and that all his reward is the privilege of bare existence.

There are many patriotic and humane Russians who have given it to me as their deliberate opinion that the Russian peasant would be better off to day than he never been emancipated. He is dreamy, god-intoxicated, impractical, and sentimental. He is always hard pressed for money, it is only too easy for him to accept the loan which the accommodating tavern-keeper offers him, particularly if he has one or two glasses of vodka instead of him. Like a child, he thinks little of the ultimate consequences of such a hasty and unwise loan. He signs the paper which is placed before him, and believes, of course, that he will easily pay off his debt, with the next harvest, particularly as the Jew promises to be most accomodating, and not press for money payment. The seeds of discontent are sown, and the man who was willing to work was assured of the comforts which a country like this should afford to all its citizens. The deplorable change has been wrought by misguided tariff legislation, and the time will come when the tariff will be restored by tipping up the laws responsible for McKinley's sin.—Detroit Free Press.

CRIMES OF PROTECTION.

McKinley, the Curse of Honest American Labor.

There is a repetition of history in the story of flat and bloodied that comes from the coke regions of Pennsylvania. Its proportions are less formidable than that of the iron and steel regions of the Hoosier Valley, and in the coal regions of Tennessee; but it springs from the same causes and is illustrative of the same evils. It is not a mere coincidence that all these deplorable affairs occur in sections of the country where the privileges of protection are greatest. The miners, the coal miners, are strongest. They are among the legitimate "enfants" of that nefarious system; inseparable from its native existence. Where it is professed to operate for the good of the "poor workingman" and is maintained especially for the amelioration of his condition, is where he suffers most from grinding poverty and all the train of evils that trod in its wake.

McKinley has been the curse of honest American labor. Duty has been exacted upon every imported article entering into our manufacturing processes, except the most trifling articles of luxury. That has passed our ports free. It has come in excesses at the expense and solicitation of protected American capital. The lowest and cheapest order of paper European labor has been imported to operate our mines and docks, and to supply us with miners, drivers, porters and other "infant" industries. Without sympathy for our institutions, ignorant, brutal and content with far less than will meet the requirements of a self-respecting working man in our own country, these free imports have worked for us far more than the general public. The cost of these imports has been paid by the constant contributions of consumers. So ignorant and helpless are American manufacturers, according to republican opinion, that, even after thirty years of the pop-feeling policy, the mere promise by diplomats to cut off a part of their imports did not move a single vote. That is protectionist doctrine in 1894 as professed by its chief exponents and proclaimed as "patriotic" and "American."

The next republican candidate for the presidency thus expains his belief in protectionism: "We must either make ourselves and our property, our lands and our investments, or we must tax the products of other nations seeking a market here."

The idea sought to be conveyed here to his ignorant and partisan hearers was that imported goods belonged to the manufacturer and that the manufacturer would be enabled to compete in Europe. As goods only come here when bought by some one in this country, all tariff taxes fall, not upon foreigners, but first upon our own importers and by them transferred to American consumers.

McKinley's gross ignorance of right and wrong, and his desire to resign him to political oblivion, if his奸计 thrives has not brought him such a fate already.—Chicago Herald.

M'KINLEY'S IGNORANCE.

Shadow Sophomore of the Apostle of Protection.

Gov. McKinley's Minneapolis speech was a laborious attempt to prove that if a ten or twenty per cent tariff in the early part of the century had not been in effect, the country, which ranges from sixty to eighty per cent, is also entirely necessary for our existence today. Tariffs which upon an average did not impose duties of more than a quarter of the percentage levied under the McKinley bill were held up as fine examples of protectionism, while the Wilson bill, a comparatively high protective measure, was denounced as trade.

It is by such claptrap as this that McKinley hopes to win the presidency in 1896. The preposterous argument is paraded that import duties should be increased with the advancement of civilization and that the protective system is entirely prohibitory. Once give a man the right to rob his neighbors of five per cent of their earnings and it is only a question of time when he will take everything, except a bare and miserable living for his victim. That has been the record of protected robbery and it is the record of protective tariffs in the United States.

The old pretext for "protection" was that infant or feeble industries ought to be encouraged by the government. McKinley's idea is that all American industries and protected industries can only exist by the constant contributions of consumers. So ignorant and helpless are American manufacturers, according to republican opinion, that, even after thirty years of the pop-feeling policy, the mere promise by diplomats to cut off a part of their imports did not move a single vote. That is protectionist doctrine in 1894 as professed by its chief exponents and proclaimed as "patriotic" and "American."

The next republican candidate for the presidency thus expains his belief in protectionism: "We must either make ourselves and our property, our lands and our investments, or we must tax the products of other nations seeking a market here."

The idea sought to be conveyed here to his ignorant and partisan hearers was that imported goods belonged to the manufacturer and that the manufacturer would be enabled to compete in Europe. As goods only come here when bought by some one in this country, all tariff taxes fall, not upon foreigners, but first upon our own importers and by them transferred to American consumers.

McKinley's gross ignorance of right and wrong, and his desire to resign him to political oblivion, if his奸计 thrives has not brought him such a fate already.—Chicago Herald.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

—Perhaps Mr. McKinley will soon explain to the deluded followers of Gen. Coxey that the only proper way to be supported by a paternal government is to hire out to a McKinley trust.

—Gen. Coxey, McKinley is now attributing all the evils of the country to fear of tariff reform. Last summer he made several speeches proclaiming that the democrats were responsible for those evils because of their delay in assembling in extra congressional session and repealing the Sherman act.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—Gen. Coxey assures us that President Harrison has had enough of office holding, and that he will not be a candidate for renomination in 1896. Green R. knows some things for he was pension commissioner under Harrison, and is believed to be on intimate terms with that ex-president.—Washington Times-Herald.

—The difference between the Mr. Reed dollar and his successor on the score of expenditure, is that the Reed congress deliberately set to work to increase expenditures, while the congress which followed it found itself under obligations to continue the rates established before it came into existence.—Oregonian. Mr. Reed knows this perfectly well, but he omits to mention it.—Boston Herald.

—The one purpose of the reorganization of the house throughout the present session of congress has been to make the democratic majority acknowledge that the Reed rules were right. To do this they have persistently tried to prove that any bill introduced by them could, if matter not how important it was to the country that such legislation should be disposed of, or whether or not it was in any way partisan or political in its nature. If the people are to conclude that the democratic party is right, then they have got to prove on what grounds are they to assume that the republican party is any wortlier?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—The tariff organs have overshot the mark. In their eagerness to demolish the Wilson bill they have exploded mines under the McKinley bill. They have succeeded in demonstrating the typical oligarchy of the Wilson bill, and the very words that they have used in denouncing that organization can be applied and are being applied by intelligent republicans to the steel rail trust, the wall paper trust, the window glass trust and other McKinley beneficiaries. The protection newspaper men are to blame for this. They have sold their own camp and they are too stupid and too ignorant to realize the damage they are doing to St. McKinley and his disciples.—Chicago Herald.

—Intelligent workingmen know this. The census bulletins prove it.—N. Y. World.

—According to the Tribune, "the democratic party has to learn that it cannot do a thing without a revenue from the root sense of that word. The deliver of out-of-the-way information finds the libraries of New York disappointing, and a writer seeking authorities upon so simple a matter as the early history of lotteries in the United States, was driven to the Philadelphia Library, after long and vain search in New York.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Were the population of South America equally divided among its preachers, every Protestant mission would have a parish of 237,000 souls while at home we would have only 800. Mrs. Jennie Decker, one of the most celebrated scholars in the matter of European languages, is learning Irish. He is at present in Dublin, taking lessons from the professor of Irish at Trinity college.

—Rev. J. R. Hicks, pastor of the First Baptist church of Barberville, Ky., has been appointed by the council as its new moderator. He is the first ever elected in Kentucky of a mind so engrossed in active church work ne cepting the position of this character.

The Lutheran church in this country has 28 general church boards, societies, etc.; 15 orphan houses, asylums, hospitals, etc.; 25 theological seminaries, 30 colleges, 12 young ladies seminaries, 43 academies and high schools, and 135 periodical publications in nine languages.

—The total population of the United States is given to be 62,632,280, with an enormous predominance of the Catholic faith. The Protestants are reckoned at 10,630,000 and the Catholics at 7,302,000, making a total Christian population of 56,992,000, leaving less than 6,000,000 for all other beliefs and no佛教.

—On a report from a committee of the Dissenting churches of New York city through their deacons, will provide for their own poor, leaving other denominations to look after needy ones of their own church. The non-conformists are to be cured for by the combined educational and social benefits of their societies.

—There are in the United States 47 Chinese temples, four organizations of Chinese culture with a membership of 1,000; of theosophists, 40 organizations having a membership of 600, and 535 organizations of Jews, numbering 150,000. In Canada according to their own representation a number between 4,000 and 7,000.

—English educators have recently sent live women to the United States for the purpose of examining the American system of education, in order to ascertain if there be any of the features that can be advantageously adopted in England, and can be incorporated in a new school bill which is in course of preparation for introduction to parliament.

—There are 2,539 negro schools now in the south, where 2,250,000 negroes have learned to read, and most of them to write. In the colored schools, 285,000 negroes are taught, and 200,000 negroes are taught in 100 schools for advanced education, and seven colleges administered by negro presidents and faculties, and of these presidents three were formerly slaves. There are 1,34 negro editors, 235 negroes 730 physicians and there are now educating themselves in European universities 247 negroes from the south.

—They TOOK THE CAR.

—Two Englishmen succeeded in getting their Berlin Berths.

—There is a decision and energy about Englishman sometimes which arrests attention. A case in point occurred recently in Washington, where colored men, women and negroes, who claimed to be citizens of the United States, filed a suit against the Great Valley of Virginia, challenging the right of the state to tax them. The court ruled that they had no right to file suit, as they were not citizens of the United States.

—My son can't get along without a car. I tell him he must have one, and he says, "I would have all suffering removed if I had a car." I tell him he must have one, and he says, "I would have all suffering removed if I had a car." I tell him he must have one, and he says, "I would have all suffering removed if I had a car."

—They are all gone. You can have uppers, thought was the response.

—Oh, no longer know me friend is dead, in fact he isn't 20 unless he has a longer birth. He must have one, doesn't know.

—The agent was sorry, but as he only had upper berths he could do nothing. Then the spokesman insisted on seeing Mr. Crowley, and that official again explained the service of any lower berth.

—To receive the news of any lower berth, "they are not good enough."

—All right, if you must, you must, answered the official. "They will cost you just two hundred and sixteen dollars. We have an extra car, and we'll get you up there for your lower berth."

—"If upper berths are not good enough?" "Aw! Yes, thanks, awfully."

—They paid the money, the empty Pullman was coupled on to the train, and the boys at the depot say that before the cars left the Englishman had made a speech to the passengers in the cars.

—They said they had paid for each of the sections and they proposed to come as near as possible to getting their money's worth.—Los Angeles Herald.

—Willing to Ass.

—Young Wife.—The minister wants every woman in the congregation to earn something for the church by her own labor, and I don't know what the world to do.

—Husband.—You speak about needing a new dress and——Wife.—Well, you, I never thought of that. I'll go to the druggist and make him pay so much an hour while I'm being fitted, and then she can charge it to the bill.—N. Y. Weekly.

—Not a Nominant.

—Nupop.—I can't sleep with the baby crying.

—Mrs. Nupop.—Then why don't you get up and walk with it awhile?

ONLY a short time since there was considerable talk about a turnpike from Hazel Green to Torrent. THE HERALD told of the proposition made by the Kentucky Union railroad at that time, and everything favored an early commencement of work on the road. The Winchester people were also interested in the matter, and the papers at that place took occasion to place the matter before the business men there that they might aid us when the time came. All that appeared necessary at that time was the co-operation of county officials and the many individuals who favored the project. Our idea then was, and we are still of that opinion, that private individuals should raise one-half the stock and the county take the remaining half. Many citizens of the county have signified their willingness to take stock—some as much as $1,000 worth, and others in sums ranging from $50 to $500. The editor of this paper will put $100 into the enterprise, and we are absolutely certain that if only one-fourth the men in the county equally as well contribute a like amount, and the county do her part, the turnpike will be built at an early day. Let some man start with a subscription paper and see how much he can raise, and let all who favor the plan send us their names and the amount of stock they will each take. Finally, let us hear from the magistrates on the subject. In this connection we have received the following letter:

Our school election passed off quietly, R. C. Children elected trustee.

Our neighbor district just over in Monroe held an election Sunday last for whisky or no whisky. No whisky carried, Good.

Bud says minks did it all, and were preparing for a strike or Coxey's army.

Ju Bates and our friend Capt. George Rice were in town today with a drove of horses and mules. If Mr. Bates would advertise in THE HERALD and get our paper to him, he would be better off with his stock, they would always be ready for trade and he would soon save the price of a mule in expense.

ELECTROPOISE!

For Babes as Well as Old Folks.

I am glad to say that the Electropose has cured me of rheumatism and illness, the result of typhoid fever, as well as catarrh. Have used it in the family from the mother-in-law, 73 years old down to the baby, 10 months old, while teething all, it worked like a charm. For throat trouble we have never found anything to equal it. Several of my neighbors have them and are all well pleased. I can not say too much in praise of the Electropose.

Mrs. F. M. CALLAHAN, Verona, Ky.

Brain Congestion and Vertigo Cured
With the Electropose.

Sirs: Last July I was taken with vertigo, a congestion of the smaller blood vessels of the brain (hyperemia.) I could not study; everything I ate disagreed with me; at last I ate nothing but bread and water, and the food did not agree with me; I was induced to try the "Electropose," in one night it had relieved the brain congestion and vertigo. I began the next day to study; I ate from that time I have been a comparatively well man.

REV. GEO. H. MEANS, Covington, Ky.

Practical as Well as Theoretical.

I am much pleased with my experience with the Electropose, and believe it in advance of any known remedy in theory for the restoration of the normal action of the system. Its effects in the cure of disease has proved its efficacy practically and theoretically.

We shall next week begin the publication of all our paper at home, and we will be obliged if those who have friends living in distant parts of the state, or country, will give us their names and postoffice address that we may mail them sample copies.

Dr. Harry Wilford, an English optician, who is temporarily located at this place, is treating a great many persons for defective eyesight, etc., and all of his patients are improving. We will publish his name in another column in the globe except the arctic country and so far he has never seen a better place than Hazel Green.

The United Baptists held their twenty-second annual meeting at Mt. Zion church on the Johnson fork of the Kentucky river last Saturday, here. About 200 people were present throughout the day, only one person under the influence of liquor being seen of men. Elder Eli Williams, of the neighborhood, and others, addressed.

During a difficulty Friday night between some of the sons boys on one side and some of the academy boys on the other, Lee Brooks, who attempted to quiet the disturbance, was cut on the right side of some one so severely that he died a fatal blow. Judge Rollin Kash Saturday the evidence was not sufficient to place the blame on any one, and so he continued the case until next Saturday.

The state declamatory contest took place not at Winchester last night. We have not heard the result, but we have laid a wager in our mind that H. C. Lacy, of Hazel Green, would win. The Pyramids of Egypt was a subject chosen by many of the others. In him we recognize a worthy successor of Menefee, Taubbee and others, who have made the name of our declamatory section famous against adverse circumstances. He made many friends, and the ability with which he handled his subject placed him in the front rank in the estimation of many of his hearers.

The Winchester Democrat, in its account of the declamatory contest at that place last Friday, says: "Henry Clay Lacy, of Hazel Green academy, came off second best. Pyramids of Egypt was a subject chosen by many of the others. In him we recognize a worthy successor of Menefee, Taubbee and others, who have made the name of our declamatory section famous against adverse circumstances. He made many friends, and the ability with which he handled his subject placed him in the front rank in the estimation of many of his hearers."

W. T. Caskey, Ben Quicksell, John Adams and others of the committee who went to Winchester as escort to Clay Lacy, are in high praise of the people of Winchester, and they are to leave with the team. But their expression is the same as that of all who visit that beautiful little city, and we are therefore not surprised that they fell in love. We always have loved her, and she is the same girl as when she was a boy wonder when John Garner and Anderson Quicksell used to push the pencil on the desk. Dancers are popularly pyrotechnic, and the club house where we nightly congregated to drink inspiration and other things, and all went well until Jake thought a slight fill up, and a call for Anderson wrote it up and for awhile we thought John Garner would have to write a few lines of farewells to her. But Jake, instead of a bier for Uncle, set up the hook and other things for the crowd, and all went away smiling as a marriage bell. Speaking of marriage reminds us that we are to be married to Hazel Green, which may Winchester tomorrow, such is our confidence in her virtue, her honesty, her good looks and her warm heart. Then we are remunerated for our trouble, and older than she was, Ayre, but like "that old bird of mine," she grows wiser, and her dress is becoming every day of the week, with which she keeps pace. And while she is older her heart is still warm, for "welcome" is the deuce-to-the-everyone, the heart of a woman who never has a bad break. But why go on? we do not love Hazel Green any less than loving Winchester, though we might love her more were Winslowe nearer.

The entertainment at the academy on Monday evening, to the accompaniment of musical instruments, was well received. I could not decide, and was hence at the expectations of many visitors, who did not know what bright children Hazel Green possessed. Some of the girls did not deserve special mention, but, in accordance with our custom on like occasions, we shall give no names, lest we err in our judgment and honor the weak. It is very difficult to say they all acquitted themselves in the best manner, though we might be of the other night's entertainments.

On Tuesday night the "children of larger growth" put on their entertainment, and it was also a pronounced success in every particular, but as sickness prevented our attendance we can only speak from hearsay. That night the entertainment however, comes favorably with any similar ones given in Kentucky. We are convinced, and the faculty deserves great praise for their patience in holding the weak and infirm, and in giving a time of school duty. Next week we will have something to say of the other night's entertainments.

J. T. Wilson, editor, created a sensation in the Methodist church at this place on Sunday morning, and again on Saturday night, and those who heard him say he is a fine pulpit orator. He was born in Clark county and raised in the city of Louisville. His language both in conversation and in his sermons displays learning, yet he has been blind since he was two years of age. He has attended the services every Saturday night from curiosity, as they had never heard a colored divine talk, but all the same he has an exceptionally large congregation. Indeed most of his audience while here was the guest of Alex Higgin, our colored friend.

Hazel Green did not win the oratorical prize in the contest held at Winchester on Friday night, but there is considerable satisfaction in the fact that Gov. L. C. Lacy, one of the judges, voted for H. C. Lacy for first place, and it is generally conceded that the young boys having won the first and second prizes, were the best. The awarding of the prizes. All who have heard Clay deliver his piece, pronounce his delivery and his gestures as though he deserved it. Clay delivered his piece, pronounced his delivery and his gestures as though he deserved it, and the audience did not seem to notice it. Next day he gave a fine speaker and a prize winner in general contests. "Rab for the "Hazel and the Green," and on top may their colors ever be seen.

While we this week get a very large number of calls for our paper, and we hope our patrons will take due notice of this. Next week we hope to print our paper at home and give a few special articles besides a weekly column. Our correspondents will confer a favor by sending in their favors as early as Tuesday and we shall be especially grateful if they will give all the information possible. We are anxious to keep THE HERALD as dependent upon the correspondents for very much of its success, and any editor feels it a very rare privilege for the editor to have letters from friends for the paper. Give us news, and we will be pleased to publish it.

SHADOWS ON THE WALL.

Our kitchen hath a winning way
To do good graces,
And sometimes it's won by graceful play
On saddened faces.
But loudest rings the prompt applause
When we're at home,
And pass merrily with voices paws
The shadows on the wall.

The trees that float beside your head
In semihaze wavings,
And flames quickly by fingers made,
Are handiwork.
Prompts the wild spring, the full grasp
And then the backward fall,
With us the world would clasp
The shadows on the wall.

Rehearsed baits, but what desire
For dear possession:
Might fiercely burns her eyes of fire,
At last she'll tire.
Till weariness unmoves the clutch,
And yields to kind recall,
Though still her longing glances watch
The shadows on the wall.

Her mistake let human smiles
Not depict her smile;
Those whom intangibles beguile—
Say are they wise?
Who like greats as fame or power,
Or wealth or honors call,
To find them, when their toils are o'er,
But shadows on the wall.

"LEADIN'S."

How Mrs. Lloyd Found Happiness by Following Them.

A pretty woman, who looked sad, sat in front of a bright fire in a parlor in the Waldorf hotel in New York. She was in bone, and the morning paper lay in her lap; she was not reading, but looking thoughtfully at the rich rug alone, and so much suffering the hard year—the paper's all full of it; and yet I don't know one single soul that can help my own self this sad day. I'd like to make a bright day for somebody that I can see enjoy it; I am tired of giving checks that only give me just the trouble of writing them, and no thanks. Just now I'm feeling very sad of that past, when she had many to love her, she seemed to hear the voice of the old nurse at home, who often said: "Just tell yer ledlin'—jeat fellin' or leanin'—honey—jeat somewharl all de time." "I'll do the same," she said; "I'll get out my ledlin's to-day, and see where they are."

In a little while she was walking quickly down Broadway with the throng. "I think I will cross over," she thought, at a corner, and then saw an elegant wagon of various sorts came by, and she turned back into the crowd going down town. Her heart was full of sadness; but when her nature gave out for the bright things, and she stopped in front of two windows that joined, although each belonged to a different store. One was full of flowers, and the other of fruits and some rare early vegetables. The tomatoes and mandarin oranges looked fresh and tempting as they lay close to the pane which had attracted her eye. When it was a very cold day for the month of March. The flowers that filled the other window were exquisite Easter lilies, holding up great spikes of bloom, orchids hanging with their queer shapes all across the front of the glass, pinks and roses, delicate maidenhair ferns, and various and bright golden daisies, and many others, all made a picture of delight; and she stood looking at them a long time, sadly and yet with pleasure. While she stood there a little girl, about eleven years old, holding a box in her hands and with a basket on her arm, stopped also, and gazed with a look of rapture at Mrs. Lloyd for a few moments. "You love them, don't you?"

"Why not?" said Mrs. Lloyd. "I will go in a moment," she said. "I want to speak to the proprietor." She went in, and told the child to wait outside for her, and after a few moments came out again. "The man gave me your father's address," she said; "and if you are going home I will go with you."

"I will go to market with me first," said Sylvia, "I always have to go to market before I go home, and we are going to have a stow away."

Mother said we could if I got any money, 'cause we couldn't have one yesterday."

"Why not?" said Mrs. Lloyd. "I will go in a moment," she said. "I want to speak to the proprietor."

By that time there were at the butcher's, and Mrs. Lloyd watched the little woman make her purchases with some amusement, and a great deal of sadness as well; for it was such a very little bit of meat that she bought after she had carefully explained what she wanted it for, and such a very small bunch of vegetables with. Presently she was getting tea.

"Dear me," thought Mrs. Lloyd, "I think that Aunt Sally was right; this must be a leading, first thing. But now how shall I go to work to help them?"

But the child did that herself, for she said: "My father has got a picture in a store over on Fifth avenue. If you'd come over there, I'd show it to you; it's in the window."

"What exchange?" said Mrs. Lloyd.

"Why, the woman's exchange, on Fifth avenue, you know and then I go to work with the money—'cause mother can't, the baby's so fretty now; she's getting teeth."

"Dear me," thought Mrs. Lloyd, "I think that Aunt Sally was right; this must be a leading, first thing. But now how shall I go to work to help them?"

But the child did that herself, for she said: "My father has got a picture in a store over on Fifth avenue. If you'd come over there, I'd show it to you; it's in the window."

"Yes, I'd be glad to; I'm just taking a walk," said Mrs. Lloyd.

"I have to cross hers anyway," the child said. "I come this way to look into this window; it's really shorter the other way, but I do love the flowers so, and then I tell mother about them. We get to the exchange first, if you don't mind waiting there a minute for me. The picture is on the way home."

Soon they reached the door of the exchange, and the child went into the basement door to deliver her bundles. She took out a delicious looking mold of jelly, and from the basket some delicate little cakes. Mrs. Lloyd was holding on, and said: "Why, those cakes look exactly like some that I used to have when I was a child in the south."

"Yes," said the woman, was taking the things; "some ladies said the other day that they were real south cake." Mrs. Lloyd said: "I'll take them," said Mrs. Lloyd, and she paid for them, and had them put in a box.

As they stood there a lady came in and said: "Can you tell me whom I can see here about some old lace I want to sell?"

"Sit down, madam," said Mr. Rhett, pinching a chair. "I shall be glad to sell you my picture if it has any meaning for you, for it has so much for us that we are very reluctant to part with it; but now we can't indulge in sentiment;" and he gave a glance about the room.

"It has a very great deal in it for me," said Mrs. Lloyd. "My father and I—he is dead now—were there for a long time, and he was especially fond of that rosebush, as everyone is who knows it, I am sure. How odd that you should have painted just the one house that I should like to have always hanging over me!"

"Old things happened to see it, but not odd that I painted it; for my wife was fond of it, and then we spent our honeymoon there. My wife was there for a long time with a gentleman who was taken suddenly ill there."

"Suddenly ill?" said Mrs. Lloyd. "Excuse me, but what was his name?"

"Ah!" thought Mrs. Lloyd. "There is another leading. I want some lace." But two minutes before she had wanted nothing so little.

Then the child stopped in front of a window, and said: "That is my father's picture, isn't it pretty?"

Mrs. Lloyd looked at it at first curiously, and then eagerly, and then bent forward to see the painter's name?

"Rhett," she said; "is that the name?"

"It is," said the child, smiling, and my name is Sylvie, for my grandpa's."

"How very strange," said Mrs. Lloyd, half to herself. "I wonder how he happened to paint that house?" But she thought again: "It is such a picturesquely old place that I don't wonder that he wanted to paint it; and it's well painted, too. I wouldn't have him sell it to anybody else for anything."

"You think it's pretty?" said Sylvia.

"I think that it's beautiful," said the lady "beautiful; and I used to live there once—long ago," she said, with a little sigh.

"Why, my mother did too," said Sylvia, and she loved that picture, and she didn't want either to put it in the window, but he said that perhaps the roses in it would make somebody buy it."

It was the picture of a long, low, and evidently old house, an inn, for there was the sign on one side and over the front grew roses that hung everywhere, and so exquisitely hung that they seemed to have been painted on the frame and to feel the soft summer breeze, that seemed to move them, now and then. Mrs. Lloyd stood fascinated, and the longer she looked the more beautiful it looked to her.

"How long has it been here?" she said to Sylvia.

"I don't know," she answered. "I will go in a moment," she said.

"I want to speak to the proprietor."

She went in, and told the child to wait outside for her, and after a few moments came out again. "The man gave me your father's address," she said; "and if you are going home I will go with you."

But the child did that herself, for she said: "My father has got a picture in a store over on Fifth avenue. If you'd come over there, I'd show it to you; it's in the window."

"What exchange?" said Mrs. Lloyd.

"Why, the woman's exchange, on Fifth avenue, you know and then I

If the following letters had been written by your best known and most esteemed neighbors they could be no more worthy of your confidence than they now are, coming as they do, from well educated, intelligent, and trustworthy citizens who, in their respective neighborhoods, enjoy the fullest confidence and respect of all who know them. The subject of the Discovery is a well known and much respected lady, Mrs. John G. Foster, residing at No. 33 Chapter Street, Cincinnati, Ohio. She writes as follows:

"I have had a very bad cold for several years. I consulted with a number of our home physicians, and received no benefit from them. I also took treatment from physicians in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Jersey City, Birmingham, and received no benefit from them. In fact I have had no physician to consult with or doctors without benefit. My brother came to visit me from Boston, and he told me to try Dr. Parker's Golden Seal Remedy. He had taken it, and it had cured him. I have taken ten bottles of the 'Discovery,' and am entirely cured, and if there should be any more cases like mine, I would gladly correspond with them, if they enclose return stamp envelope."

No less favorable are the following from Mr. J. A. Buxton, a prominent merchant of Jackson, N. C., who says: "I had been troubled with skin disease all my life. I grew older, the disease seemed to be getting stronger; until I tried the Discovery. When I began taking it my health was very poor; in fact, several persons have since told me that they thought I had only a few months to live. My temperature was about 123 degrees. The eruption on my skin was accompanied by severe itching. It was first confined to the back, but gradually spread over the neck and head, and the itching became strangely uncomfortable. This was my condition when I began taking the 'Discovery.' When I would get up in the morning I would find a kind of bramy scale would fall off."

The Greatest Medical Discovery of the Age.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

DONALD KENNEDY, of ROXBURY, MASS., has discovered in one of our common pastures a remedy that cures every kind of humor, from the worst Scrofula down to a common cold.

He sold it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder humor). He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston, and from various parts of the country.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the right quantity is taken.

When the lungs are affected it causes shooting pains, and makes the person feel as though the same with the Liver or Bowels. This is caused by the ducts being stopped, and always disappears in a week after taking it. Read the label.

If the stomach is foul, then it will cause sourness, feelings at first.

No sense of desire necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

Dose, one tablespoonful in water at bed-time. Sold by all Druggists.

HOME HINTS AND HELPS.

Vanilla Custard. One quart milk two heaping tablespoonsful cornstarch, two eggs, lump of butter the size of a walnut and one tea-spoonful vanilla extract. Dissolve the cornstarch in a little of the milk, allow the other to come to a boil before adding the beaten eggs, cornstarch, butter and sugar. Stir well until it thickens, add the vanilla and turn out into a dish.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

Chocolate Pie. Heat a pint of sweet milk with two table-spoonfuls of grated sweet chocolate. When partly cool add the yolks of three well-beaten eggs and white of one, with three-quarters of a tea-spoonful of sugar and one tea-spoonful of vanilla. Pour this into a nice crust and bake. When done, whip the whites of two eggs stiff, add two table-spoonfuls sugar and spread over the top. Return to the oven and brown a little.—Orange Field and Fireside.

English Plum Pudding. One cupful of sugar, one cupful of chopped suet or butter, two cupfuls of sweet milk, one cupful of raisins, one cupful of currants, one tea-spoonful of essence, one tea-spoonful of salt, two tea-spoonfuls of flour, one tea-spoonful of dried yeast. Mix and put into a double boiler that is floured inside, drop into a kettle of boiling water and boil three hours. Never stop the boiling and keep the kettle full of water.—Good Housekeeping.

Ambushed Asparagus. Take one quart of asparagus tops, boil for twenty minutes, drain and draw. Take one dozen small light-colored onions, remove the centers, set in the oven to broil, laying each top in the pan. Put one pint of milk on to boil, beat three eggs, and stir in the boiling milk with one table-spoonful of butter, a little salt and pepper; chop the asparagus tops, and add them to the milk. Fill the rolls with this mixture, put on the tops, and serve hot.—Harper's Bazar.

Keeping Plantain. When plantain is old, or if it has made a slow growth, it becomes tough and stringy, and if then used, peel it before it is cooked. When young and tender the thin skin will cook as well as the rest, and the delicate color that it adds to the sauce makes it a welcome addition to the table. When green, however, more care is needed for handling; cut it into suitable lengths, pack closely into cans, fill up with cold water and seal. For use turn off the water and prepare as though it was fresh. The fresh juice of plantain, with the addition of sugar, a few drops of lemon extract and cold water makes a refreshing drink for a warm day.—Housekeeping.

Boning, Boiling and Frying. Take a pint of hominy, pour cold water over it, stir and let it stand. Then pour off the water. Do this twice, then let it soak in three pints of water or milk overnight. In the morning, put it over to cook in a double boiler, add a little salt, and stir often. If possible, add a few drops of oil and some water or milk. It should be just thick enough to settle down smooth soon in a deep dish. Fine hominy will cook in two hours, the coarse requires three. It is very nice eaten warm with cream and sugar. To fry it for breakfast take a small amount in the morning and heat in a double boiler, add a few drops of butter. It will take about fifteen minutes to brown both sides. Use only the fat for frying.—Boston Budget.

Jail Birds Recaptured.

Oberles Smith, Charles Desmond and Frank Brown, three suspected crooks run at Mayfield, a few days ago, made a bold dash for freedom Friday morning. While working in the city quarry they suddenly attacked the guard, James Molen, overpowered him and removing the balls and chains from themselves bound and shackled him, and then fled. After a short time the police came to keep them from giving the alarm. The crooks crossed into Ohio, but were pursued and recaptured by Police Judge Wadsworth and Policemen Stockdale and taken back. They talk of prosecuting the two officers for kidnapping. They have been identified as belonging to Cincinnati.

I have two little grandchildren who are teething this hot summer weather and are troubled with bowel complaint. I send them Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoeal Remedy and it acts like a charm. I carry a small bottle for children with bowel troubles. I was myself taken with a severe attack of bloody flux with cramps and pains in my stomach, one-third of a bottle of this remedy cured me. Within twenty-four hours I was out of bed and doing my house work. —Mrs. W. L. Dunagan, Bon-Aqua, Hickman county, Tenn. —For sale by John M. Rose.

For Jearing at Old Glory.

While Samuel Courtright, an old veteran of Valparaiso, Ind., was decorating his residence with flags and hunting William Hampton of Owenton, and Orlando Merritt, of Lexington Ky., expressed their displeasure by cheering for Jeff Davis and the southern confederacy. Courtright, however, continued to do it with other remarks. Warrants were issued for their arrest. They entered a plea of guilty and were fined and sent to jail for 11 days.

"Many of the citizens of Rainsville, Ind., are never without a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house," says Jacob Brown, the leading merchant of the place. This remedy has proven of so much value for colds, croup and whooping cough in children that few mothers who know its worth are willing to do without it. For sale by John M. Rose.

Frankfort Convicts Escape.

Wednesday night, Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell, two "Tangles" engaged in the penitentiary engine room at Frankfort, made their escape by scaling the walls, and neither have been captured. Lee was sent up from Letcher county for house-breaking, and had already served three years of his four years' sentence. McNeill went from McCracken county, and also had less than a year yet to serve.

Some time ago I was troubled with an attack of rheumatism, used Chamberlain's Pain Reliever and was completely cured. I have since advised many of my friends and customers to use the remedy and all speak highly of it.—Simon Goldbaum, San Luis Rey, Cal. For sale by John M. Rose.
